A: For those of you who might find this helpful later, I had a similar issue where the Windows 10 driver doesn't have the speed capability I am looking for. I fixed the issue by installing the latest (at the time of writing this) driver from Prolific: and selecting the PL2303 Rev. A USB to RS-232 adapter. A: I have done some research on this myself. There are many solutions out there but none seem to work properly. So I was looking for another solution and found this one: This is the source of the modules. It only has one limitation: You will need to compile this yourself. Otherwise no one will help you. I tested this and it worked fine. The adapter works nicely with the D-Link DWA-130 and DWA-131 adapters. I have compiled it for Windows 10 too but this is just a small executable which is great to start from. I had to use the third party driver for the mentioned adapter to use it with Wireshark. It did not work with the native Windows driver. An RPG about an incompetent yet learned high school student, and some people who are in his way of his dreams. After 9 years of not playing an RPG, I decided to start up one. An RPG about an incompetent yet learned high school student, and some people who are in his way of his dreams. I'd like to show you the classes and just how this will work. You'll play as our main hero, Chaol. Throughout your life he has done nothing, and everything will be starting fresh. You will be a high school freshman, senior, and best of all: an upperclassman. That means you can, depending on your class, make new friends, and influence others through your ranking. Or not, if you get a good score in Biology or Calculus (you have time to make friends if you get good at the grades, though). At the end of your life, you will have over 30 years of experience. (This will, however, be very different from an RPG where you fight to gain experience, since you get your experience through different events in your life f678ea9f9e
